Man can drink and fall from grace. A life of crime can lead. Dabachery pictured on his face, His garments showing need.

He turns and says, I will retrace. The path I long have trod, Before I yield to dire disgrace. Or am placed beneath the sod.

A man can rob and kill his friend, Or break his mother's heart, And yet his fellow man will lend A hand for an upward start.

Thus on he goes; each day his crime Is worse than that he led, His manly sense is blurred with slime, His hands are stained with gore.

At last to the prison he is sent, His garb doth bear the stripe. A petition to the government went, His crimes from the book to wipe.

If freedom, then, this man doth gain; Even though his crimes be black, An eager feeling then doth reign, To put him on the track.

But take the girl, both pure and fair, As the lily that blooms in the spring, Brought up under a mother's care, To a mother's love doth cling.

For if, she hears the silvery tongue, Of the man we just have seen, And he to her the old song, sung, You are, you are my queen.

And she in all her innocence Believes this human snake, His words to her is evidence, How can there be mistake.

Alas she finds his vows have flown, Like chaff before the wind, While she, her wild oats have sown, In heaven's sight has sinned.

Back to her home and mother dear This wayward one does go, With sorrow deep, that sheds no tear, And heart bowed down with woe.

Do the girl call, present the ring? Do they meet her with joy and glee? Do they sing the songs they used to sing? Do they say, this for thee?

No, they spurn her as they would a snake, And drive her from the home, Where once her presence it did make A bright and happy home.

She is despised by all her sex, No matter what she wears, To see her live, it doth them vex, O' women do forbear.

Why not take her by the hand, This fallen one of Eve, And point her to a better land, Where no one will deceive.

Man can fall and rise again, And in society shine, But woman, once you lose your rein, Friends no longer round you twine.

So why do we push the fallen girl, And lift the fallen man? For they our brightest thoughts unfurl, On earth, no other can.

Hoke Smith's Editorial.
The Atlanta Journal, edited and controlled by Hoke Smith, a member of President Cleveland's Cabinet, likens the Kentucky platform to Joseph's shirt tail. The distinguished Democratic editor demands the election of Gen. P. Watt Hardin as a vindication of the free silver principles of the Democratic party. The editorial was telegraphed all over the world last Sunday. It says:

"As the matter now stands, the platform is nothing—less than nothing. It is an insult to the Administration and to the redoubtable Henry Watterson, who has been captured by the money devil, body and boots. It is an insult to the free coinage Democrats, and in its cowardice it slaps all honest men of all parties squarely in the face."

"It is about the size and shape of the rag that the virtuous Mrs. Potiphar tore out of the tail of Joseph's variegated coat, and the gold bugs have just as much reason to gloat over it as Mrs. Potiphar did over her conquest of Joseph."

"It is to be hoped that the punishment which such cowardice invites will not be visited on the party by the honest voters. Gen. Hardin does not deserve the defeat which the action of the convention encourages. The cowardly straddle of the platform is not an echo from any hint or statement of Gen. Hardin given in the preliminary campaign. His attitude before the people was not one of compromise. From start to finish he advocated pure Democratic principles and made no apology for those who had betrayed the party. Whenever and wherever he lifted up his voice, he declared boldly and unequivocally for the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver at the present ratio, and denounced the financial policy of Cleveland and Carlisle in terms that the most ignorant voter could not misunderstand or mistake."

"The convention instead of making a platform to fit the principles of the party on which G. A. H. had won popular approval, concluded to dodge the financial issue altogether. They made no declaration in favor of British gold standard and none in favor of the free coinage of silver. It is true, they endorsed the platform which Cleveland and Carlisle have repudiated, and voted down by a tremendous majority a resolution endorsing the financial policy of the administration, including the bond issue; but in spite of that the platform is as cowardly and disgraceful an affair as ever emanated from men professing to have the courage of their convictions."

"The cowardice of their utterance would amount to nothing if it were not calculated to weaken the chances of the hold of free coinage Democrats whose views and whose candor represents the honest masses of Kentucky. As popular as Gen. Hardin has known himself to be, the cowardly straddle of the main issue will undoubtedly have a tendency to weaken him among the sturdy voters who are not afraid of Wall Street, and who have no reason to be ashamed of their convictions. If Gen. Hardin himself had shown any purpose or desire to dodge the financial question his defeat on the cowardly platform would be certain, but it is to be hoped that the bold stand he has taken in behalf of true Democratic principles, and in favor of the rights of the people, will result in his election by an overwhelming majority."

Will Hardin Decline?
The Louisville Times says: "Gen. Hardin might well hesitate to accept, under the present conditions a gubernatorial nomination fairly won and courteously tendered him by a united party on a golden platter, but he can ill afford to take the Dead Sea fruit of a temporary victory to be won by the dishonest action of a partisan Committee on Credentials and tendered him over the protests of a majority of his own party. The candidate of this convention who does not come with clean and unquestionable credentials to both his party and all the people might as well go to a gort's house for wool or seek to gather figs from thorns."

Conceded Defeat.
Oh, Papa! How could you give away the snap in this manner? Col. Whallen one of the big Democrats of Louisville, tells the public that he can't for life of him see how they, the Democrats, can pull through their State ticket. He was entertained a delegation of local labor leaders at Louisville a few days ago, when a Cincinnati Enquirer reporter called for an explanation of his views. Col. Whallen says the Democrats will lose the state by 60,000.

"I am still as good a Democrat as there is in the State of Kentucky," said he, "and propose to vote the ticket straight in November. I also intend to work harder this year than ever before, because I realize that only by extra and unusual exertion all down the line can we hope to win. But for the life of me I can't see how we are going to pull that ticket through. The silver people returned home very sore, and I look for a revolt among them very shortly. Everything considered, therefore, I repeat that I can't see how we can possibly hope to save Kentucky this year."

Hardin to catch the silver votes and an empty platform to tickle the rest of country, is the shrewd way the Kentucky gold bugs managed it, the ticket is purely a local affair, but the platform was intended for foreign consumption. It means nothing. It endorses Cleveland and the Chicago platform, and if Cleveland's letters mean anything, they are in direct antagonism to the Chicago platform. What is modern Democracy, anyhow? Who can tell?—[Cin. Con. Gazette.]

A POSSUM STORY.

BY M. QUAD.
One night when Zeb White, the 'possum hunter of Tennessee, and I were sitting under a persimmon tree watching for 'possums, he quietly began:

"You see, I had bin feelin' onery mean for a good many weeks. Had a run of fever fast, and when I got over it I had no appetite or am-bushin. I was so weak I could hardly get out the house, and nothin' the ole woman could do 'peared to brace me up. One day it cum to me all of a sudden, and sez I to myself, sez I:

"Zeb White, yo' ar' hungerin' fur 'possum meat, and that's what's the matter. Yo' never be the man yo' was 'till yo' hev a good squar' meal of baked 'possum. That's what'll put fat on yo' ribs and am-bushin in yo' soul as nuthin' else will."

"I was too weak to go out huntin', but I sent fur Abe Mitchell and told him what I wanted. He was a good-hearted critter, and he spent three days 'possum huntin' before he gin it up. Then he cum to me and sez, sez he:

"Zeb, I've tried my best, but shuck my hide if that's a 'possum left in these yere Cumberland mountains! I've hunted and hunted, but I can't find hide nor hair of no 'possum! Can't yo' make roast woodchuck fill the bill?"

"Can't do it, Abe."

"Baked coon ar' mighty fine eatin'."

"Yass, but I'm sot on 'possum, an' 'possum I must hev or I shan't never git well."

"Then Jim Cumberland he went out and hunted and hunted, and Sol Parker he went out and hunted and hunted, but nary a 'possum did they bring in. Jest 'peared like all the 'possums had dun failed that y'ar, and that Tennessee was gwine right to ruin. The longer I waited and the mo' I thought of it the hungrier I got fur 'possum and the meaner I felt about it. Wall, one evenin' I sot on the doorstep, bein' powerful weak, and lickin' my chops fur 'possum, when the ole woman looks up and sez, sez she:

"Zeb, we've dun tried roots and yarks and medicines, but they don't do no good. Yo've got to hev 'possum meat or I'll be left a widder!"

"That's it, and I feel it in my bones."

"I've bin thinkin', and I reckon I'll pray fur yo' to-night."

"As how?"

"As yo' may go out to-morrow and kill a 'possum yo' self."

"Reckon it'll do any good?"

"Can't say, but I'm hopeful."

"But if the 'possums hev all left this yere state of Tennessee?"

"Then the Lawd may dun bring 'em back agin. Would yo' be satisfied with one 'possum, Zeb, one big, fat 'possum?"

"Skissus! Reckon I want at least three. If the Lawd is gwine to send us 'possums we might as well hev three as one."

"That's so, and as long as I'm prayin' it's jest as easy to ask fur fo' or five as fur two or three."

"Make it six, ole woman, as 'possums hides ar' now wuth fo' bits apiece at the store."

"Yo' wouldn't object to seven, Zeb?"

"No, dun my buttons! Tell yo' what yo' better do. Jest pray fur ten of 'em, and hev 'em all big and fat. I don't want to be too turned pertikular about it, but 'twon't make any mo' prayin' fur yo' and as long as the Lawd is gwine to send 'em, we might as well hev a hull drove as to fuss around with a few. I no bog, and yo' kin tell the Lawd 'bout b'ars and coons and woodchucks. We'll take it all in 'possums, and then thar won't be no minkin' up of the meat and pelt."

"It's axin' a heap, Zeb, bein' as how neither of us hev bin to church fur ten y'ars, and bein' as how yo' ar' powerful free with yo' cuss-words, but I'll take the chances."

"Wall, stranger, the ole woman went out to the mews shed and put things mighty plain and without any triflin', and when she cum back she began to grease the handle,

When Italy was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Cotton States and International Exposition, a resolution was passed directing the architect to prepare plans for an annex to Machinery Hall. This is made necessary by the fact that the great manufacturing States of New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut have recently asked for large space in which to make exhibits, consisting mainly of machinery of finest kind.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Kentucky Democracy has endorsed President Cleveland it is noticeable that that gentleman keeps on fishing.

LOUISVILLE is all split up again—it's the Howard divorce suit this time.

STORMS over the West and North-west did immense damage last Sunday night.

PURIS Corbett and Fitzsimmons are advertised to fight at Dallas, Texas, on or about October 31.

THE Chairman of the State Central Committee has muzzled Jo Blackburn so much so that the latter gentleman had to get up and decline making a speech to a Court House full of people last Monday at Carlisle. How that must have hurt Jo.

SOME Louisville Smart Alex has invented a definition for fortnight. He says it's the length of time it requires the Louisville Base Ball Club to win a game, and he calculates that the Club will have just time enough to win five more games by the close of the season.

THE Hon. James B. Eustis, Ambassador to France, is suggested as a Democratic candidate for President next year. Judging from his recent London speech Mr. Eustis has one point at least of superiority to the present incumbent of the high office of President—he is an American with a big A.

THE Bank Tax decision is best understood and appreciated when its practical workings are laid bare thus: The common every day citizen who lives in the town of Hartford pays on every dollar's worth of his assessed property at the rate of $2.22 1/2 cents to the one hundred dollars, while the Bank of Hartford pays only 75 cents on the one hundred dollars. If that's equal rights to all and exclusive privileges to none we want no more of it.

No wonder the Democrats want the money question out of the campaign. Hear the Owensboro Messenger for libel the jury awarded Miss Tate $500.00.

Under the Nicholson Law all the Indiana saloons were closed last Sunday and two thousand old toppers from Jeffersonville came over to Louisville to spend the day.

THE Chicago Times-Herald has offered $5,000 in prizes to the successful competitors in a race from Milwaukee to Chicago with horseless carriages. The race is to take place not later than November 1.

THE Louisville Sunday Star contains in its last issue an able editorial on the Bank Tax question. Among other things it says:
"A discussion of the bank tax decision resolves itself into the simple question: Shall the banks be exempt from local taxation while all other classes of wealth are taxed, and taxed alike? This proposition is so plain that every voter in Louisville and Jefferson county can readily grasp it. The framers of the new Constitution designed that no property should escape the responsibility of State and local government and provided that all should pay and pay alike."
"The Court of Appeals, in its wisdom, has seen fit to render a decision exempting the one hundred and twenty or more banks in the State from all taxation except the seventy-five cents paid into the state treasury."

What is true of Louisville and Jefferson county, is equally true of Hartford and Ohio county and of every other town and county containing a bank. It is the very height of class legislation to say that the Hartford workingman shall pay on his $1,000 house $9 school tax, $4 town tax and $9.25 County and State tax, while the Bank of Hartford with its $30,000 capital stock pays not one cent to the school, the town nor the county, and but 75 cents on the hundred dollars to the State. And yet the Court of Appeals, by its decision, says this is law.

THE State has been behind in the payment of the teachers about $100,000, which is just now being paid. The lengths to which Democratic editors are going in a vain attempt to relieve the present State Administration from the just odium for permitting such a condition of affairs are interesting. The Frankfort Capital even goes so far as to make this statement, which is glaringly false: "Most of the money was paid the teachers before they earned it, and all of it as soon as it was really and equitably due." Many of the teachers have waited since payday on the second Saturday in January for the balance due then and nearly all of the teachers had completed schools by the middle of February. To say that "most of the money was paid the teachers before they had earned it," is not only false in every word, but is a reflection upon the County Superintendents. The law provides that the teachers' salary is due at the end of each month and provides for the payment on the next succeeding second Saturday, beginning with the month of October. The Democratic administration in Kentucky is responsible for this delay in the payment of the teachers and no amount of subterfuge can avoid the responsibility.

TUESDAY'S Courier-Journal contains the following remarkable statements:

"At a meeting of the nominees upon the Democratic State ticket, which was held yesterday afternoon in the law office of Mr. James P. Helm, it was unanimously determined to ask the State Central Committee to use its efforts to have the discussion of the currency question eliminated from the coming campaign, and to themselves entirely ignore it in their canvass of the State. While the nominees met for the sole purpose of discussion the political situation, and have not the power to control the campaign, or the manner in which it shall be conducted, they were unanimous in the sentiment that the currency question has been settled by the Democrats of the State convention assembled, and that it should be, and, in fact, had been, eliminated from the campaign by the platform adopted, which is the party's declaration of principles."

"Feeling that the question had been settled, so far as the party is concerned, by a majority of the Democrats in the State, the nominees felt that it would be both unwise and unnecessary to reopen it or discuss it from the stump. The declaration of party principles stands for itself, and by it the nominees propose to abide. The nominees also felt that the currency question was not a State issue, and that it properly had no right in the campaign in which State officers were to be elected, none of whom would have anything to do with the question as a national issue."

This means, if it means anything, that the party is more hopelessly divided on the currency question than the people had been led to believe, and that neither the Sound Money nor Free Silver Democrats will endorse the proposition of the other in the campaign. It follows then that the only way out of it is to back out as the above declaration says the candidates have done. This is the first time in the history of the Democratic party in Kentucky for a quarter of a century that the candidates of that party have been willing to fight it out on State issues, and they would not be willing now except that necessity drives them to it. The Republicans are ready for the fray and they will see to it that there is no lack of information for the voter along any or all these lines.

want more. Remember

AFTER preaching for the last ten years or more the inexcusable falsehood that a Protective Tariff was driving the farmers of the country to starvation and especially so in Kansas and Nebraska, where the great mortgage humbug was paraded before the people to catch votes for Free Trade, the Courier-Journal in an unguarded moment tells the truth. It seldom tells the truth when it is in its normal condition. It agrees with Secretary Morton that farming is profitable, that Kansas and Nebraska farming is profitable and that Secretary Morton, notwithstanding one of those earthy "blighting mortgages" made money on his Nebraska farm and it further gives a reason why farming generally is not more profitable in these words:

"The reason why farmers are not more successful is perhaps mainly because of their lack of business training."

But the light of truth was two powerful for the Courier-Journal and before the writer had recovered his equilibrium he had said this:

"In the crowded States of the Old World, where the taxes and rents are enormous, there is more basis for complaint from farmers. In this country of cheap and fertile lands there is no other vocation a man can follow which promises such sure and permanent rewards as agriculture. The fact that a nondescript political party depends for its existence on assertions to the contrary does not alter the fact."

This great Democratic Bible turns its back squarely upon the argument which has been for years a part of the stock in trade, not only of Henry Watterson, but of every other Democratic editor and orator in the land. Where is the man who has not heard Democratic speakers affect almost tears in depicting the young man who in his early twenties marries and buys a farm and starts into life. How the Tariff would rob him and how he and his wife and children would go ragged and cold and hungry and yet the farm would not be paid for and the debt growing larger, and all, all on account of the Robber Tariff Barons. Who is it that has not heard this rot from the stump until the speaker grew red and vehement in his denunciations. And the Courier-Journal comes along and says the farmer is all right no matter what a "nondescript party" says about it. Is it possible the Democratic party did not know how foolish its arguments were until the Populists took them up? But Henry says he let Mr. Beck do his studying for him while he was for Free Silver and when he studied for himself he was then for Sound Money. May be then he's been studying the farmer question a little. Who will he name as his scape goat to carry the shame of the misfit editorials he has been pouring out for years in behalf of the poor down-trodden, starving, mortgage ridden, Tariff robbed farmer?

Joking Col. Nall.
The New York Sun pokes the following harmless fun at Col. Ion B. Nall:

Through all the agitation in Kentucky one fact shines out vivid as lightning. The Hon. Ion Brad Nall was nominated for Commissioner of Agriculture. To obtain this nomination has been the aspiration of Mr. Nall's waking days and the dream of his nights for months. Every lover of agriculture must rejoice in his triumph. There is not a blade of grass in Kentucky that has not polished itself in honor of Mr. Nall's victory, not a field of hemp that doesn't laugh in ecstasy, not a still that doesn't speak louder than words. Ere many months have gone great improvements will be seen in Kentucky. The introduction of self-milking cows, producing nothing but sterilized milk, and the arming of sheep with shears and razors, both for closer and more convenient shaving and as a protection from dogs, are among the least amendments of agriculture which are expected of the Hon. Ion B. Nall. Burgoo and barbecue experiments stations will be established at convenient points, and a Cuckoo reservation is already planned. When the hand of the Hon. I. B. Nall is put to the plough, the plough will have to speed and the crops will have to hump themselves.

Populist State Ticket.
The Populists in convention at Louisville last week nominated the following ticket:

For Governor, Thomas S. Pettit, of Daviess.
For Lieutenant Governor, John J. Blair, of Nicholas.
For Treasurer, M. R. Gardner, of Hardin.
For Auditor, C. H. Dean, of Woodford.

For register of Land Office, J. E. Quicksall, of Wolf.
For Attorney General, S. M. Peyton, of Hart.
For Secretary of State, Don Singletary, of Hickman.
For Supt. Public Instruction, H. H. Farmer, of Henderson.
For Commissioner of Agriculture, M. L. Scott, of Shelby.
For United States Senator, Clarence S. Bate, of Jefferson.

"A Graduate of Coin's Financial School" Set to Music.
W. C. Campbell, of Topeka, who wrote a satire, which was set to music, entitled, "A Graduate of Coin's Financial School," recently sent a copy of it to Secretary of Agriculture Morton. Acknowledging the receipt of it, Mr. Morton says:
My Dear Sir: I have to thank you for "A Graduate of Coin's Financial School," set to music, and to express my appreciation of the satire therein contained.

Before the money creed of these financial philosophers was evolved, mankind generally supposed that it required something more than legislation, statute-making, to institute thrift and prosperity. In the dark ages, however, the alchemists, necromancers and enchanter, with weird ceremonies, professed to transmute worthlessness into value and to change the form and character of material things by mere incantations. They sought the philosopher's stone, and their search for the means of compounding gold out of baser metals was in vain. Centuries ago they left that field of experimentation.

It remained for Bland, Bryan, Stewart, Teller, Sibley and their zealous disciples, by mere wagging of the "silver tongues," to evoke from the viewless viscera of vacuity vast volumes of value. When these financial enchanter shall have thoroughly demonstrated and established their theories of making wealth and prosperity through the mere, "Be it enacted" of legislation, all mankind will be at rest, an eternal holiday and absolute worklessness will settle down upon this luxuriant and beautiful globe. Legislation will take the place of human effort, physical and intellectual. Money, food, raiment, meat and drink, board and lodging will be secured by statutes and parades regained by enactment. Respectfully yours,
J. STERLING MORTON.

Taxes.

ELLENDALE FAIR.

Ellendale is THE FAIR of the Green River country and the biggest in Western Kentucky. Wm. Rapien aims to make it THE FAIR of the State.

The grounds are situated in the Eden of Daviess county half a mile from Curdsville on Green River and the natural beauties of the place have been so enhanced by these years improvements as to make Ellendale as the lovers of Paradise pictured by Claude Melnott in the Lady of Lyons. At Ellendale everything is new, bright and up to date. A new three-story hotel, a two-story floral hall, a large, new poultry building, a new 200ft addition to the Grand Stand, new office, waiting and dressing rooms & all new, commodious and convenient. Everything at Ellendale is new and bright without a speck or fly on it. The new half mile regulation race track is thought to be the fastest in Western Kentucky. The peculiar nature of the ground makes it so. Cyclists say its a daisy.

The Floral Hall is an immense structure of two stories, well ventilated, well lighted and beautifully decorated. The inducements offered ladies in it are much greater than at usual fairs. Besides the premium for the best specimen of its class $25 is given to the best display of each county represented by at least three displays and a $100 Packard organ is given to the best display in the Hall. The space is free to all and the premiums paid in full.

The three-story hotel is a large commodious and beautiful structure. It has every convenience essential to the comfort of guests. The attendants will be well trained, attentive and obliging and the table will be supplied with the substantial fare of the country combined with the delicacies of the season. Dinners, lunches and all seasonable refreshments will be like everything at Ellendale fair and reasonable.

In every branch there will be striking departures from the old grooves of county fairs in all departments. Send to the secretary Robt. T. Smith, for large and artistic program and scan the premium list for novelties scattered through it and examine the trotting racing and running races, the ladies' men's and children's bicycle races, the mule, hound, goat, foot and potato and other races.

The wheelmen of Ohio county ought to look at the nice list cycle races and the handsome prizes offered. Anyone desiring to enter any of the races can find entry blanks from Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., druggists, Hartford or address the Secretary. Cheap rates on all railroads in Western Kentucky and excursions from Owensboro to Curdsville via the Texas R. R. to Spotsylvania and from there by boat to Curdsville. Admission 25cts.

Tuesday—first day—being LADIES DAY, ladies and children under fifteen years admitted FREE. Ellendale is new, bright—complete—no back numbers—everything up to date.

They Advertise.

Ask ten men that first pass out on any street corner in town where any certain bank is, and one will know, five will guess wrongly, and four will not even hazard any thought on the subject. And the banks are the oldest and most stable and most important institutions in town. Of the leading dry goods stores these same ten men, who may never in their life have been in a dry goods store, will be able to place three or four, some of them a good many more than that, I fancy. And yet you hear that men do not read advertisements.—(Washington Capital).

Republican and

O'DOHERTY.

The Eloquent Irishman Addresses a Large Crowd at Hardinsburg.

POLITICS IN BRECKENRIDGE CO.

HARDINSBURG, Ky., July 4th.
The members of St. Romualds Catholic Church gave a picnic—a Fourth of July picnic—at National Park to-day.

During the Republican State Convention at Louisville a deputation of leading Republicans of Breckenridge county called upon Mr. Mat O'Doherty and requested that he make a speech at Hardinsburg on the day of the picnic aforesaid.

Mr. O'Doherty cheerfully and readily assented to do so. The fact that he was to address the people on the Fourth had been widely advertised by the managers of the picnic, and a result there was a tremendous crowd on hand. Early in the morning a stream of humanity set in towards the Park, from all directions. The east bound and west bound trains disgorged immense loads of people who rapidly found their way to the picnic grounds. When Mr. O'Doherty took the stand there were about 5,000 people on the grounds. As many as could get within hearing of the speaker gathered around the stand. The speaker was introduced by John P. Haswell, Jr. Mr. O'Doherty spoke about two hours to the great delight of all the Republicans, and to the complete discomfort of all the Democrats present. The orator completely ignored the silver question and argued that all the financial distress and business disaster that had fallen upon the people within the last three years, was the result of Democratic Tariff Policy. He said that with the establishment of conservative tariff laws, prosperity would again smile upon us.

POLITICS IN GENERAL.—The Republicans of Breckenridge county are entirely satisfied with the Republican State ticket and will carry the county handsomely in November. The majority in November will be no less than 500. On Monday the 13th, the Republicans will hold a county convention to nominate a candidate for representative. There are two candidates in the field, Hon. Jonas D. Wilson, of Cloverport, and Hon. Charles Blanford, of Bewleyville. Mr. Wilson carried the county two years ago and made an acceptable representative. A large number of good Republicans think it would be right to endorse him. The fight however will be close as Mr. Blanford has a large number of warm supporters who are exceedingly anxious to nominate him. It matters not however, which gentleman is nominated, the entire party will enthusiastically support the nominee and he will be elected by an overwhelming majority. The Populists have already put up a victim in the persons of Mr. Smith Wagoner. This elegant gentleman has no more show of success than was had by the traditional feline when in the fiery furnace without claws. However we understand that he expects to have his inn out of the campaign, which we trust he will have abundantly as he will have to pay for it. The Democrats have not as yet selected their lamb for sacrifice. We understand from chairman Whitworth however that it will be selected about the middle of August and that will be without spot or blemish. However, after November it will be known only as that which was slain.

CENTERTOWN.

Health is good. Crops are doing well. The farmers are rejoicing over the recent rains.

So far as I have been able to learn the Republicans of this precinct are a unit for W. I. Rowe for Representative. They feel also that Centertown precinct is justly entitled to the nomination, and will make a strong pull and hard fight for Uncle Billy's nomination. Uncle Billy may not be as good looking as some men, but when it comes to sound, practical sense and judgment of what he has as much to the square inch as any man in Ohio county. Uncle Billy will be in line.

How Byron Smith Lost His Life. The Owensboro Inquirer of Tuesday contains the following account of

LEXINGTON

A Leading Teacher Writes his Impression of the State Educational Association.

A Great Meeting and the School Interests of Kentucky Receive a Boom.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 3, '95.

The third and last day's exercises of the State Association have passed. The teachers are enthusiastic over the success of the meeting. Visitors and teachers are delighted with the success of the affair.

Prof. Rhoades, President, says: "This meeting is two hundred per cent better than we have ever had. Hereafter everything will date from the Lexington Meeting."

The royal reception extended to the teachers by the city and county government of Lexington and Fayette, have been, and are, noble and grand. And we all say the best things we can think of about this beautiful country and our grand reception.

Our county, Ohio, has here four representatives, viz.: Z. H. Shultz, C. M. Crowe, Miss Maggie D. Williams and your scribe.

The noonday banquet, extended to teachers on Tuesday was a grand success as well as a most elegant affair. The spread consisted of five long tables, each seating about fifty people.

The Rev. Mr. McElroy gave thanks after which Mr. Rogers Clay made a very appropriate, as well as a beautifully worded address of welcome.

The next thing of course came the eating, which all enjoyed with a hearty good will. After the first course Mr. Clay announced that Prof. J. J. Glenn, of Hopkins county, would respond to the toast, "The Kentucky State Teachers' Association."

This he did in a short, happy, appropriate speech, in a very happy, pleasant manner.

Prof. Carothers, of Louisville, one of the genial editors of Southern School, responded to the toast, "Our Hosts," which he did with graceful compliments to Lexington and its people.

President Patterson's "Welcome to the Visitors" in behalf of the schools was able and well timed and to the point.

No more fitting place for the meeting than Lexington. Here in this city, more than a century ago the first institution of learning west of the Allegheny Mountains was founded. And, throughout all of these past years, if we could have had men of pure and lofty minds, as were the minds of those men who laid and who stood by the foundations laid by them, the school interests, both public and collegiate, would not, to-day, be snuffed by any State in the Union.

But, be as it is, or be as it may, I say all hail to the common interests of the common schools of Kentucky and her prospects.

Who may I ask are to bring about these grand and noble hopes and aspirations for the common school interests of our noble State, but the true earnest, faithful teacher.

Among the good things said by President Patterson in his address was: "No man and no woman is fit to be a teacher of youth, to be the guide, philosopher and friend of the young whose life is false, dishonest and depraved."

While it is true that knowledge is power, it is also true that virtue is character. In our hands are placed the greatest of all trusts—the fitting of the child to a very great extent for life and for death.

How Byron Smith Lost His Life. The Owensboro Inquirer of Tuesday contains the following account of the drowning of Byron Smith, at Golconda, Ill. last Saturday:

A letter was received this morning from Mr. J. P. Vickers, dated July 8, stating that the body of young Byron Smith has not yet been found. In the letter Mr. Vickers told the story of the sad accident. He says:

"It all happened this way. The party had their boat anchored here with rocks and Saturday morning, about 4 o'clock, there was a considerable gale. This caused the anchor at the stern of the boat to give away and the boat was drifting out in the river. Byron got in the skiff from the back part of the boat, intending to go to the shore with a line and make fast the boat. In pulling around the boat he let an oar get away. The wind was very high and soon the skiff and the house boat drifted far apart. The waves drifted the skiff from the shore and tossed it about like a cork shell. It was almost too dark to see and the boys on the boat could not tell how to aid Byron. They could only catch glimpses of him by the flashes of lightning. A big wave dashed him overboard and that was the end."

For those who desire to know, we will say that this trip is a most reasonable one, and can be extended and enlarged to suit the convenience of the passengers. Many have made the trip on $35, while those who spend $50 would take in Washington, Baltimore and Norfolk, and some who spend $75 or $100 would visit New York via the old Dominion Steamship Co., and take some side trips up the Hudson to Long Branch and Conop, Island, and to Boston and points further East.

HARTFORD COLLEGE.

The Leading School of Western Kentucky Enters Upon Its Sixteenth Year.

WILL OPEN AUGUST 26.

WAYLAND ALEXANDER, PH. D.

Hartford has long been the educational center of the Green River country. From the days when she furnished a school for the illustrious Ben Hardin until now, Hartford has been the acknowledged school town of this vast section of the State. Perhaps no town is better situated for the purposes of furnishing the very best surroundings for a successful school. Hartford lies in the midst of a fertile country and is renowned for the healthfulness of her climate and location and for her supply of good water. Her population is made up of the very best types of Kentucky manhood and womanhood. Her society is as cultured and refined as can be found in any town in the State of many times her size.

There are no less than four different active denominations of Christians in the town and unparalleled opportunities for religious culture are extended to citizens and students alike. There are no saloons here and perhaps never will be any.

The outer world is easily reached by means of the best bus lines to the C. O. & S. W. R. R. at Beaver Dam and overland to Owensboro, beside the early completion of the Locks on Rough River will give transportation to and from Hartford by steamboat.

Such is Hartford, the location of Hartford College and Business Institute, which since its foundation fifteen years ago has steadily increased in usefulness and influence until it is to-day recognized as one of the leading Colleges of the State. Its record of last year in interest, number of students and general good work is unequalled in the history of the school. The curriculum by hard work and patient attention has been extended until it covers as wide a range of studies as is found in any other College in Kentucky. So that any one completing its course is abundantly prepared to enter any University in the land.

of the classes in Physiology and Hygiene and Anatomy, are two rising young physicians whose abilities have already been recognized by some of the ablest men of their profession in the State.

Misses Anna Gregory, Sallie Quisenberry and Sophia Werner, the two former of whom will have charge of the Preparatory Department and the latter of the Elementary and Kindergarten, are young ladies of splendid talents and enviable professional attainments. Miss Gregory has taught with much success in the schools of Dallas, Texas, and Central City, Ky. Miss Quisenberry has been a very successful teacher in the schools of Ohio and Muhlenburg counties, where she has given uniform satisfaction, while Miss Werner has taught with much success in the College at intervals for several years.

The Stenographic and Type Writing Department will be in charge of Miss Lulu Walker, who is an expert in both and whose students are occupying remunerative positions.

Miss Margaret Nall, who will have charge of Instrumental Music and Vocal Culture, is an able musician and is now in New York taking lessons under the training of Prof. Mason, one of the world's eminent pianists.

The former students of Hartford College are occupying prominent positions, not only all over Kentucky, but all over the West and South, where they are held in the highest regard for their moral and intellectual worth. No school can offer superior advantages to those offered by Hartford College to young men and women desiring an education. The school is the pride of the town and county and every citizen feels it his especial duty to make the stay of students here pleasant and profitable.

WATERPROOF BRICK.

Interesting Experiments with Oil-Soaked Stone and Clay.

At a recent meeting of the Australian Association for the Advancement of Science, Prof. Liversidge read a paper on the "Waterproofing of Brick and Sandstone with Oils." These experiments were made with a view of ascertaining the length of time that brick and sandstone are rendered waterproof or protected by oiling. The oils used were the three commonest and readily obtainable for such purposes, namely, linseed oil, boiled linseed and the crude mineral oil known as "blue oil," used for preserving timber.

The weatherings were made upon a flat portion of the laboratory roof fairly exposed to the sun and weather. Good, sound, machinery-made bricks were experimented on. The amount of oil and water taken up by the sandstone was very much less than that absorbed by the brick, although the area of the sandstone cubes was much greater than that exposed by the bricks. Equal amounts of the raw and boiled oils were absorbed; the blue oils, however, was taken up in much greater quantity by both brick and sandstone, but by the end of twelve months the whole of the thirteen and a half ounces of blue oil had apparently evaporated away and the brick had returned to its original weight, but those treated with raw and boiled oils remained unchanged. After the second oiling in November, 1890, and exposure for nearly four years and two months, they had practically retained all their oil, inasmuch as they had not lost weight and were also practically impervious to water. It was noticeable that the sandstone cubes treated with raw and boiled oils returned to their original weights, but do not appear to have lost the beneficial effect of the oil, being practically impervious to water.—Detroit Free Press.

Pneumatic Horse Collar.

Horses with sore shoulders will be a rarity, it is said, when the pneumatic horse collar comes into general use. It has been invented by a Londoner, and is being introduced in the leading European cities. The patent consists of the usual leather casing, but instead of being packed with a hard, nonyielding substance the pneumatic principle is applied, a rubber air chamber being substituted for the packing, this in turn being covered with leather, and when the collar proper is inflated a flexible and yielding surface is presented to the horse's shoulders. It must be apparent to the most casual observer that the collar in present use must cause and give man's noble companion an immense amount of pain. Owing to the harsh padding it is impossible for the collar to adapt itself to the animal's shoulders, and, therefore, chafing and sundry other ills ensue. With the pneumatic collar, as before stated, chafing is impossible, as, instead of the horse having to adapt itself to its collar, the collar adapts itself to the horse the moment it is put on.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Drew the Line at Generals.

One summer, a few years after the war, a gentleman was traveling in the south, and he got to talking with a farmer in some little town who was employing a considerable number of men at his haying. The farmer told him that most of them were old confederate soldiers.

"You see over there where those four men are working?" asked he. "Well, all of 'em fought in the war. One of 'em was a private, one of 'em was a corporal, one was a major, and that man way over in the corner was a colonel."

"Are they good men?" asked the gentleman.

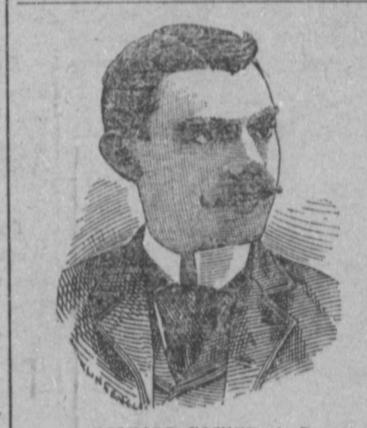

"Well," said the farmer, "that private's a first-class man and the corporal's a pretty good one, too."

"But how about the major and the colonel?"

"The major's so so," said the farmer.

"But the colonel?"

"Well, I don't want to say nothing against any man who was a colonel in the war," said the farmer, "but I've made up my mind I won't hire no brigadier generals."—Argonaut.

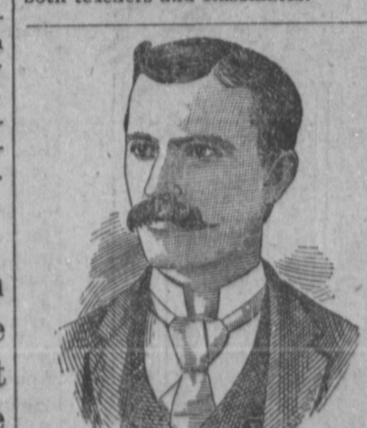

RICHARD FOSTER, A. B.

The Faculty is composed of the ablest and most energetic teachers, men and women whose high attainments in intellectual culture and moral dignity render them well qualified for the responsible position to which they are called.

Dr. Wayland Alexander, President of the College, is the peer of any educator in the South, and is a teacher of long experience whose splendid executive ability, professional tact and great powers of mind enable him to control and instruct, to hold in restraint the too erratic mind and to spur the sluggish student, and above all he is a man who possesses, in a remarkable degree, the power to inspire his students with lofty ambitions.

Prof. Richard Foster, A. B., Vice President, is one of the ablest of the young teachers of the county and has just returned from a year at the Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn., where his abilities as a student won for him the admiration of both teachers and classmates.

O. M. SHULTZ, PH. D.

Prof. O. M. Shultz, Ph. D., is without question one of the ablest teachers Ohio county has ever produced, and his excellent work has rendered him in popularity and real merit second to no teacher in Western Kentucky.

SEEKING NEW HOMES.

The South Contesting with the West for Settlers.

It is interesting to watch the different emigration movements which are going on just now in this country. The southern papers claim that there is evidence of a very decided turn of tide from the west to the south, the region around Memphis being the principal Mecca of the incoming pilgrims. From Chicago, on the other hand, come reports of the usual spring rush of immigrants, though it is acknowledged that the numbers are not so great as during some former seasons. This, however, is accounted for on the ground that the reports of hard times in this country have penetrated to Germany and Scandinavia, whence the principal influx has lately set forth. Many have been deterred from coming by fear of not being able to find work, but the influx, even under these unfavorable circumstances, has been so great as to allow the west to put up a strong case against the southern claim of superior attractions. Chicago, as the port of entry to the greater west beyond, has its railway stations crowded daily with foreigners, mostly Swedes, Danes and Norwegians, who are pressing on to find homes and employment. Their number may be counted by scores and hundreds. Memphis is more definite, and claims that over a single tributary railway were brought in since December 1 over five hundred carloads of household furniture belonging to immigrants who had come to that section to live. Moreover, the south claims that ex-Gov. Northen's colonization scheme will soon bring into Georgia about twelve hundred settlers, mostly union veterans and their families; and Florida, watchful of this enterprise and desiring to emulate it, has asked its legislature to take measures to attract colonists to some of the unoccupied parts of its territory. These are only a few of the migratory movements and plans that can be traced without difficulty, and they indicate an evident attempt on the part of the south to compete with the west in offering inducements, not to manufacturers and capitalists alone, but to immigrants and home builders as well.—N. Y. Post.

A Story of My Ramble.

In 18— while I was yet a lad of only fourteen summers being sent some distance from home for the purpose of feeding swine, it being after doing my errand I concluded I would take a ramble in search of some flowers I wandered over the mountains and hollows until at length I came to a cave and then the thought struck me that I would search about the cave and see what I could find, after looking about for sometime I saw two large cats, they were spotted and seemed to be of a wild vicious nature, after wandering about the cave for a short time and being amazed over what I had found, yet I had not forgotten the flowers, the object of my search and so I started off at a lively gate to hunt flowers. I wandered on some time and after I had gone some distance I saw unless I returned night would overtake me before I could ever reach my home so I returned my footsteps thinking I would once more visit the cave and see the beautiful cats, but in this I was mistaken for on my return I missed the way I had intended to go and by this time I could see that night was approaching and the birds sang there cheerful songs in the trees above me, by this time I became fatigued and somewhat frightened, but on I went and as I ascended on the top of a large mountain I looked toward the West I saw a huge black cloud rising. By this time the sun was setting and the birds sang more beautiful than ever, at this point I could not describe my miserable feeling, knowing that cyclones were very common at this season of the year and night had come upon me and I knew not where I was, a peculiar feeling came over me that could hardly be described for as the cloud raised the thunder roared and the lightning flashed, knowing that something must be done and done quickly I sought shelter under the trunk of a fallen tree, by this time it was dark and the rain began to fall in torrent streams and the wind blew and the timbers were falling in every direction about me, death was staring me in the face, about two hours later the storm had ceased and the stars in the heavens began to shine, but what to do I knew not for the timber had fallen so thick on the ground that it was impossible for me to get any where and pondering in my mind for sometime what to do for the best, I at last concluded to remain with the fallen trees for the night, so I laid down and tried to sleep but alas no sleep for me for I knew my mother's eyes were bathed in tears, at length morning came and the sun rose beautiful and I started for home I traveled on until about 9 o'clock when I came to a farm it was the strangest place I ever saw and as I neared the house I thought I would make inquiry as to where I was and get information if possible how to find my mother's house as I came nearer I saw a woman, she was a stranger and I arrived at the gate I saw it was my mother.

Better Days.

The State Teachers' Association will today conclude a very interesting three days' session at Lexington. Prof. McHenry Rhoades, Principal of the Frankfort Schools, and President of the State Association, responded on Monday to the welcome address of the Mayor, County Superintendent and others, and, according to Lexington paper, made a fine speech, the concluding paragraph of which was as follows:

The recent improvement in the schools of the state is so marked and recognized as to call forth just and laudable commendation. As great as has been our change for the better, as rapid as has been our progress, I do believe that we are but standing in the open portals of a greater educational era and that these improvements in the past few years are but the faint rays of light upon "the misty mountain tops" of our educational horizon, which will soon grow into the broader radiance of an intellectual day, whose glorious light of eternal truth will arouse this beloved old State of ours from the highlands of Pike to the lowlands of Hickman, shedding its gracious effulgence alike on mountain, Blue Grass, "Penerile," and purchase. To this end is the Kentucky Educational Association committed. We thank you again for your kindly welcome.

A man has been found in New York whose internal apparatus is badly twisted and "all out of hope." He read a financial argument made by John G. Carlisle in 1878, and another in Kentucky by the same gentlemen in 1895, and the result, though painful, was not surprising.

Samson believes in advertising. He took two columns and brought down the house. Yet men will read this today who expect to "bring down the house" with an inch "ad." when they ought to take two columns.

Office of THE PIONEER PRESS COMPANY, C. W. HORNICK, Supt. St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 7, 1894.

Bureka Chemical and Mfg Co., La Crosse, Wis.

Dear Sirs.—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked fifteen to twenty cigars regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physicians told me I must give up the use of tobacco for the time being, at least. I tried the so-called "Keeley Cure," "No-To-Bac," and various other remedies, but without success, until I accidentally learned of your "Baco-Curo." Three weeks ago today I commenced using your preparation, and to-day I consider myself completely cured; I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which ever inveterate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "Baco-Curo" simply wonderful, and can fully recommend it. Yours very truly, C. W. HORNICK.
